

HISTORY CLUE

#

4

The first engine-powered airplane flight in Washington state occurred in 1910. One of the spectators was William Boeing, who would later help found the Boeing Airplane Company. For more about the history of Northwest aviation, read page 4 of Bart's Travelogue. If you don't already have a Travelogue, you can find one in the Magical History Tour section located at the front of your local Bartell Drugs store — or visit historylink.org/bart.

YOUR MISSION: Visit the Museum of Flight, south of downtown Seattle. On the west side of the museum's main campus (between the Red Barn and the Personal Courage Wing exhibit building) is a life-size bronze statue that honors a famous Washington state aviation hero. Complete the following information, then drop your entry in a Bartell Drugs drop box or mail it to the address below.

Name of hero _____

Importance to Northwest aviation history _____

Quote on the statue _____

(staple a piece of paper to this clue if you need more space)
