

Coastal Forest

The coastal region has trees like the Western Red Cedar. It grows in the coastal region because it is not hot or cold. It receives the most rain. There are more trees here because they like this kind of forest.

Native Americans First Among the Forest

There are different kinds of Native Americans like the Nez Perce. They make their houses out of wood. They live in tepees. They build canoes out of Ponderosa Pine.

11/29/01

Forest Regions of Washington State

Adam

Mountain Region

There are different kinds of trees in the mountain region like the Douglas Fir. It can stand the coldness from the mountain. There are different kinds of trees in the mountains. The Douglas Fir grows in other places too.

Lowland Forest Region

There are different kinds of trees in the lowland region like the Sitka Spruce. It only grows in the lowlands because it grows in a forest and needs sun. There are different kind of trees there too.

Intermountain Region

There are different kind of trees in the lowland region like the Western White Pine. It grows there because it needs dry soil and it needs the sun. There are different kinds of trees also. It's dry there and the temperature during the daytime 90-100 degrees F.

